McCollister's Delivers Microsoft Equipment

McCollister's was approached by a forwarder to see if we had the capability to haul the first 60 of approx. 200 "Super Racks" that Quanta computer in Fremont was building for a Microsoft Data Center in Boydton, VA.

The challenge was that they were 112" tall in crates, weighed 4020 lbs. each, and the customer wanted to ship in "pods" of 10. (this is too much weight for a high-cube trailer)
The customer eventually agreed to shipping in 3 waves of 20 racks, only if McCollister's could provide the necessary 9 teams within a span of 12 days. Thanks to our corporate operations team and all involved we were able to pull this off!

Upon delivery in Virginia, it was discovered that the company that was hired to offload and uncrate the racks was not prepared to do so. McCollister's team of drivers jumped in and performed this service as well. The customer was so happy with the services we provided they have requested that we service all subsequent shipments along with shipping all empty crates back to Quanta on the West Coast. A job well done to our team who made this possible!
